Rabbi Jonah Wise, 70, Hailed For Compassionate World Service

Dr. Jonah B. Wise, Rabbi of the Central Synagogue, 652 Lexington Avenue, in New York, for the past twenty-five years, and one of the U. S. national chairmen of the United Jewish Appeal for the last eleven years, was honored at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, marking his seventieth birthday.

Speakers at the dinner included David Sarnoff, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America; Edward M. M. Warburg, general chairman of U.J.A.; Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion; the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, Pastor of Christ Church, Methodist, Park Avenue and Sixtieth Street; and the Rev. Dr. Theodore Cuyler Speers, Pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, Sixty-fourth Street and Park Avenue.

Rabbi Wise is the son of the late Rabbi Isaac Mayer Wise, founder of American Reform Judaism, and is himself a leader of the Reform Jewish movement. In 1933, at the risk of his life, Dr. Wise went into Nazi Germany and succeeded in organizing a program of self-help for the almost completely demoralized and panic-stricken Jewish community.

Describing Rabbi Wise as a "pioneer in Jewish religious broadcasting," Mr. Sarnoff told the dinner guests that "I speak from intimate knowledge when I tell you that he is one of those men primarily responsible for the important place which the national networks have given to the transmission of religious values."

"Organized American Jewish philanthropy," Mr. Sarnoff declared, "which has at its core the simple love of man for man — the universally recognized as a huge, highly effective machine, second in size and score only to the Red Cross.

"But the oil that keeps it functioning, the power that enables it to accomplish miracles, is compassion — the spirit which Dr. Jonah Wise has been continuously able to infuse in its complex operations."

In his message of greeting Dr. Sockman saluted Dr. Wise as a "friend, a colleague, a great soul, and a man of God."

"Jonah Wise," said the Methodist churchman, "has combined local loyalties with large outlooks. While leading a devoted congregation he has extended his ministry to the ends of the earth. His comradeship with other faiths in the service of his community has been matched by his statesmanship in world-wide philanthropy."

In echoing the sentiments of Dr. Sockman, Dr. Speers said that despite infrequent meetings, New York's Protestant ministers were "daily conscious" of Dr. Wise's "friendship, his standard of work as God's servant, his standard of values as a man and a public servant and his outreach of compassion and kindliness."

Recalling Dr. Wise's long affiliation with the United Jewish Appeal, the Joint Distribution Committee, and the "Message of Israel" national broadcasts, Rabbi Eisendrath hailed him as a "one-man civil defense agency and public relations ambassador from the Jewish community to our neighbors."

"It is important for us," he said, "to recognize this truth which Jonah Wise long since grasped and implemented in his radio messages, that there really can be no interfaith relationships in America between Jews and Christians unless it be actually between genuine Christians and genuine Jews.

"By this I mean Christians and Jews who recognize the validity and vitality of their respective faiths. In other words, there can be no interfaith without inner faith [illegible]."

Clash Over Army Service Of Women In Israel

Freed from his party's agreement with the Orthodox bloc by the fall of the Government coalition, Premier David Ben-Gurion has precipitated another bitter clash with Israel's religious leaders, both political and clerical.

He has given notice that he intends to introduce an amendment to the Compulsory Military Service Law requiring women who claim exemption on religious grounds to serve in agricultural settlements, social welfare agencies or military offices. All Israeli women between 18 and 28 are liable to two years' service in the armed forces and are required to take annual one-month refresher courses after their training is completed.

Israel's two chief rabbis called on the Premier in a last-minute effort to dissuade him, according to the New York Times. There was talk among the Orthodox bloc of calling a national day of prayer and advising women who would be affected by the new amendment to refuse to comply.

Although Mr. Ben-Gurion's Mapai party has less than a majority in the Knesset (Parliament), he is assured of being able to obtain the amendment's passage. It will have certain support from the Mapam, left-wing opposition party, which has been seeking this change for two years. Until now, the Mapai prevented its going through as a concession to its Orthodox coalition partners.

The coalition of religious parties and the Mapai broke down several weeks ago over the issue of religious education. Since then the Government has been continuing on a provisional basis.

Religious leaders have steadily fought compulsory service for women in their ranks. They give [illegible] army is an important adjunct of the Orthodox definition of the women's role and life in the Army might lead to immorality. Second, other countries do not impose service on women in peace-time and Israel should take their example.

Mr. Ben-Gurion's supporters say that thousands of women have been availing themselves of the religious exemption to shirk their duty. According to these sources, the

W.J.C. Attempts To Unify Jews Of Brazil

Progress in the difficult task of establishing a centralized, truly representational working organization of Brazilian Jewry was reported by Dr. I. Schwarzbart, member of the Executive and director of the organization department of the World Jewish Congress, upon his return from a mission to Rio de Janeiro. Dr. Schwarzbart, who was honored by leaders of all sections of Rio Jewry upon his arrival in the Brazilian capital, said that a conference of delegates of the federations of Jews in Brazil's two biggest cities, Rio and Sao Paulo, is to be held this spring to plan again the formation of such a national Jewish organization.

Pointing out that the 120,000 Jews of Brazil form the second largest Jewish community in Latin-America, the WJC leader stressed the importance of such an organization from the viewpoint of both Brazilian Jewry itself and of Jewry the world over. Stating that there were symptoms among the Jewish youth of Brazil of cultural estrangement from Judaism, he said that the Brazilian community was aware of the danger that its young people might forget their heritage. Through such constructive steps as the establishment of Jewish schools and the scheduled foundation this year of a chair of Jewish science and the Hebrew language at the University of Rio de Janeiro, efforts were being made to offset this danger, he said.

However, a centralized body would be able to make these efforts more effective both by coordinating them on a national scale and by providing technical and financial assistance to the smaller and less well equipped Jewish communities, the WJC representative added, pointing out that about 80,000 of Brazil's Jews lived in the two [illegible] would enable the Brazilian community, so heterogeneous in its composition, to make a greater contribution to the cultural and spiritual well-being of the entire Jewish people, Dr. Schwarzbart emphasized.

The WJC leader, who expressed belief that the smaller Jewish communities would join a national fe-

Bronfman Foundation, With Fund Of Million, To Teach Free Enterprise At Columbia

Formation of the Samuel Bronfman Foundation, with an initial capital fund of $1,000,000, to promote understanding of the United States system of free enterprise through a research program at Columbia University was announced this week by Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., distillers.

Although the foundation eventually may expand the educational project, it plans at present to use the major share of its income through interest — about $40,000 annually — to endow professorships, fellowships and a reference center at Columbia.

Objectives of the foundation, which was named in honor of Samuel Bronfman, president of the parent company, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Ltd., of Montreal, were listed as:

1. To study and teach "the essential characteristics and techniques of democratic business activity" for the guidance of students, teachers and business executives.

2. To study the means of business administration that will facilitate innovation and growth.

3. To contribute to the progress of industry and to "make it clear to an enlarged section of the free world that individual enterprise plays a vital role in the modern economy."

The grants to Columbia, where the program will be in the jurisdiction of the Graduate School of Business, are to be made annually for an indefinite period. If other programs are undertaken, the foundation's capital will be increased by the Seagram corporation.

Philip Young, dean of the School of Business, said a Bronfman Professor of Democratic Business Enterprise would be appointed soon, to take office on July 1 and plan the research program, which is scheduled to begin in the fall. An assistant professor also will be named.

With the grants, the university hopes to be able to name five Bronfman Fellows each September, with stipends of $2,000 to $2,500. The reference center will publish results of the research program, which is to be conducted in accordance with the objectives of the foundation.

Establishment of the foundation and the agreements with Columbia were made known at a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, which was attended by officials of the affiliated Seagram companies who were honoring Mr. Bronfman on his sixtieth birthday.

Dr. Grayson L. Kirk, vice-president and acting head of Columbia, accepted the program in behalf of the university. He cited it as an example of industry-education cooperation that would further democratic ideals, says the New York Times.

Mr. Bronfman hailed the nation's economic organization as "superior" to all others. He expressed the hope that the research program would bring further improvements, and that it would help Americans to understand more clearly "our way of life."

To Float Big Israeli Bond Issue In U.S. In May

Premier David Ben-Gurion of Israel warned that because of the increasing international tension his nation "may not even have the three years we had hoped for and which we so urgently needed to implement our vital schemes of immigration and development."

His warning was contained in a special message sent to Benjamin G. Browdy, president of the Zionist Organization of America, in which the Israeli leader congratulated Mr. Browdy for assuming the chairmanship of the forthcoming Israel bond drive in the U. S. for the Zionist Organization. The actual floating of a $500,000,000 Israeli bond issue is scheduled for May 1, and will be under the direction of the American Financial and Development Corporation for Israel.

The Premier's reference was to the three-year plan that had been first formulated in Jerusalem last September. At this meeting, Israeli officials and prominent United States Jewish business and communal leaders agreed to raise $1,000,000,000 for the immigration and economic development needs of Israel, and to take care of an expected 600,000 immigrants during the next three years.

Finance Minister Eliezer Kaplan said in the Israeli Parliament that the Government would float fifteen-year coupon bonds paying 3½ per cent and twelve-year saving bonds with a maturity value of 150 per cent. He told the House it was planned to spend $500,000,000 as follows: 33 per cent for industrial development, 24 per cent for agriculture, 12 per cent for power plants, 8 per cent for transportation, 7 per cent for trade and services and the balance to establish a mortgage bank and an Israeli counterpart of the Reconstruction and Finance Corporation.

Pending approval by the Securities and Exchange Committee the issue will be floated on Israel's third Independence day. Banks headed by the Chase National have agreed to act as agents, Mr. Kaplan said.

Was Pioneer In Rayon Industry

Herman Chopak, fifty-eight, for twelve years president of the Textile Distributors Institute, Inc., the rayon converters' trade association which he founded in 1938, died at the Arizona Biltmore Hotel in Phoenix, where he was on vacation with his wife, Mrs. Abby Chopak. He lived in New York at the Hotel Pierre. Mr. Chopak retired last year as president of the institute, becoming honorary chairman of the board of directors. He had turned his interest at that time from rayons to the gray goods weaving industry.

He had devoted much of his time to fund-raising and civic activities within the textile industry and had been chairman of his part of the industry in campaigns by such groups as the Red Cross, the Greater New York Fund, the Federation of Jewish Charities, the United Jewish Appeal, and the Council for Returning War Veterans. He was 1951 chairman of the chaplains' corps fund of the Retail Associates Group, Inc.

Mr. Chopak was born in New York and attended DeWitt Clinton High School. After serving in World War I, he became a salesman for Samstag & Hilder Bros., textile firm. In 1920 he joined his brother, Jules S. Chopak, in the Chopak Textile Company, one of the first concerns to handle rayon fabrics, which were then known as artificial silk.

The company manufactured knitted rayons, the weaving of rayon fabrics not having been developed. But later the company went into the woven rayon field and became one of the largest rayon converting firms in New York.

Mr. Chopak continued to operate the company after the death of his brother in 1935 and 1938, when he distributed his interests among the Charmette Fabrics Company, Inc., Charmette Prints, Chopak-Solow Corp., Chopak Fabrics Company, Inc., and Tricot Knitted Fabrics. Surviving, besides his wife, are two sisters.

POSTAGE STAMPS SHOW 100 YEARS OF HISTORY

A century of Jewish history through postage stamps is the subject of a unique philatelic exhibit now available for booking through the Jewish Center Lecture Bureau of the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB). Through hundreds of postage stamps, seals and covers — envelopes which have gone through the mail — highlights of the past century of Jewish history are unveiled. These cover such periods and events as Palestine under Turkish rule, the British era, the White Paper and "illegal" immigration, Zionist Congresses, the pre-Hitler era, Hitler in power, the fall of Poland and Czechoslovakia, the ghettos and the death camps, the "era" of displaced persons, the battle for Israeli independence, the piercing of the "Burma Road" to Jerusalem, the evacuation of Cyprus, partition, and the creation and growth of the new State of Israel.

Also in the collection are anti-Jewish forgeries of British stamps, stamp oddities which show the use of the Star of David by more than 10 countries, Jewish National Fund seals, many of which were used and accepted as postage stamps, money used in the ghetto, photographs, and shields and armbands which Jews were made to wear. The collection also includes a photostat of a cablegram which proves that the Jews of Palestine aided in the Warsaw Revolt.

Emil Weitz, noted Israeli philatelist and executive director of the Israel Coin Distributors Corp., organized the exhibit under the auspices of the American Section of the Jewish Agency. Jewish Community Centers, synagogues, Jewish schools and other community agencies will be able to view the exhibit.

Hebrew U. To Be Great Book Center Of Jewry

BY NORMAN BENTWICH

The Library of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, which is also the National Library of Israel, is the residuary legatee of the Jewish communities of Europe which were exterminated by the Nazis. It was agreed by the various Jewish bodies that were formed immediately after the end of the World War to deal with the salvage of Jewish literary treasures, that what was not taken for the libraries and institutions of learning in America and Europe should go to Jerusalem.

In fact, some 200,000 volumes and pamphlets have been despatched from Germany, most of them recovered from the vast hoard at Offenbach. Some 80,000 were from Germany; 70,000 from Poland; 45,000 from Czechoslovakia. A large part of the treasure is now scientifically arranged in one of the temporary libraries which the University of Jerusalem has had to improvise since 1948, when it was cut off from its home on Mount Scopus. This collection is situated in what is known as the David Building on King George Avenue.

When the shelves and stacks were exhausted in the land of austerity and scarcity, ingenious use was made of the packing cases in which the books arrived. They have been turned into book-shelves, rising in tiers from floor to ceiling. The number of 200,000 volumes is indeed deceptive. For in many cases the salvage has retrieved scores of copies of the same book. Thus sets of the Talmud, German text books on Jewish History, Literature and Theology, prayer books, and the like, are multiplied. The Israel Ministry of Religions will help to distribute the surplus copies, and there is no lack of demand for more books from the hundreds of new settlements which are springing up in Israel.

The collection includes, however, some notable acquisitions for the National and University Library, which are the more valuable at the present time because access to the half-million volumes on Mount Scopus is cut off, and only a tithe of the half million has been bought down to Jewish Jerusalem since 1948. Here, for example, is the library of Prof. Hermann Cohen, the philosopher, and the library of Prof. Bernays of Breslau, rich in classical literature and including a complete series of the Byzantine historians and ecclesiastics. Here, too, is a collection of some 2000 Yiddish books published in the Soviet Union since the Russian revolution, and hitherto difficult to get. Here, also, is a fair collection of Anglo-Judaica, the books written by the Jewish intelligentsia of England and America, and a wealth of English Blue Books and White Books and pamphlets about Palestine. And lastly, here is a fair representation of the Jewish press of many lands. It was all found higgledy piggledy in Offenbach, and is now systematically arranged.

The salvaged library will of course ultimately take its place in the one central library of the Hebrew University. It goes to make Jerusalem, as it should be, the most important depository of Jewish books in the world.

ACTRESS WINS BROTHERHOOD AWARD

Miss Madeleine Carroll, actress, received the annual Brotherhood Award of the New York regional committee of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The presentation was made at a luncheon at the Concourse Plaza Hotel, the Bronx, N. Y., by Grover A. Whalen, special events chairman for Brotherhood Week. Miss Carroll was honored for "outstanding service in helping to improve human relations, particularly among the youth of the world."

She told the 350 persons representing the Bronx service clubs: "The world conflict today is one of ideologies, the fight to win men's minds. Representatives of the three great faiths, working side by side on problems of social and civic concern, can and will free the world of bitterness and resentment. In the struggle for freedom, at home and abroad, our greatest weapon is our love of and faith in God."

Almost unlimited quantities of peat have been discovered in the Huleh, following investigations carried out by Professor L. Picard, head of the Hebrew University's Geology Department and Director of Israel's Geological Service, in connection with the reclamation of the section. Professor Picard was convinced, from certain geological manifestations, that there was peat in the area, and after boring had taken place to a depth of 30 metres, it was to be found even at a depth of 80 metres. Peat is a carbonised form of dead vegetation, usually found in marshy districts, and is used extensively in many parts of the world for fuel, fertiliser, and as a source of gas. The high nitrogen content of the Huleh deposit will make them a valuable source of fertiliser. Further investigations may now be made with a view to finding brown coal (lignite) at a greater depth.

Great Excitement In A Jewish Village

Deep in the hinterland of southern Morocco there stands the Jewish village of Oued Znagillah. It is a primitive place. Water comes from a well in the center of the village, where the women stand and wait in line to fill their wooden buckets. The houses of the town are made of mud-brick; only the synagogue is built of stone. It is a poor village. There is no electric light in the town, and no one owns a radio set. Children go barefoot, and they are hungry most of the time. There are many sick and ailing.

News from the "outside world" is slow to filter into Oued Znagillah. But word has now come into this Jewish village of 426 men, women, and children that there is a State of Israel, where Jews are citizens of their own country. Word has come, too, that in the city of Marrakech there is an organization which is giving Jews medical care, and food and clothing — all free. And so the village wondered: could not these benefits come to the Jews of Oued Znagillah, too? Word went out from the village and soon the answer came. Help was coming. — The Joint Distribution Committee was sending food and clothing.

The day the "Joint" came to Oued Znagillah, a truck, loaded with six bales of used clothing and canned milk, was the most exciting morning Oued Znagillah had known in a long time. With the truck came David Elkaim, vice-president of the Jewish community of Marrakech. With him was the man from the JDC. The truck alone was enough to cause a sensation. It was the first time any motor vehicle had come into the village since 1943. But the bales were emptied, and when the cases of milk were opened and the supplies distributed to each family head in the village, every human being in town was present, and the morning became a holiday.

Pullover sweaters, skirts and overalls, shirts and stockings and underwear and even shoes came out of the bales and were distributed as each family-head was called up by name and given his allocation. Then came the milk, along with instructions on its use, and a supply of little metal objects called "can-openers." It took only a couple of hours to distribute the food and the clothing among all the villagers of Oued Znagillah. When the visitors prepared to leave, some of the youngsters, already wearing the JDC rompers and shoes and blouses they had been given, climbed up to the cab of the truck to see what made the thing work. The elders of the village pronounced their blessings, and the rabbi of the synagogue kissed the hem of the garment of the "Joint" man and thanked him for his generosity.

"We know now we are not forgotten," said the bearded elder. "We know you will come back again, and we are grateful." Something new had come to Oued Znagillah. There was hope, the certitude that more help would come again, and the knowledge that there were Jews far from the dust and poverty of Oued Znagillah who knew about them, and cared.

Says Comfort And Spirit Come First In Home

The stable values of home rather than its decoration were stressed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaker at the February luncheon meeting of the Home Fashions League at the Hotel Roosevelt, in New York. More than 300 members and guests of the league, main objective of which is promoting significant trends in home furnishings, were present.

"We must build in our homes what we want to send forth to represent our nation," said Mrs. Roosevelt. She said that she felt her own home in a small transformed factory has some of the stable values of a home despite the fact that she needs new curtains. "I've had the present curtains over sixteen years and I hate to get new ones," she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt stressed the importance of homes with an atmosphere that represents the feelings of people in them. "A home should be comfortable for every one living in it as well as guests," she said. She likes homes where the children drop their coats in one place and their rubbers in another, where all have a chance to exchange ideas and where a curiosity exists about what every one thinks. She is a firm believer in family discussions. We cannot have rigid rules in our homes if we want to work out an understanding of what we want in our country, she pointed out, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

She likes homes where every one has a say on what he wants to do. "It works," she said. Recalling the visit of a guest from another country to her home, she said that during the guest's stay he was made conscious of what every one in the household was going to do or was doing. One grandchild burst in and asked to go to the barn to see a new calf. Two more children arrived unannounced and began playing in a corner. When the guest left he confided that he felt he was beginning to understand democracy.

Mrs. Roosevelt feels that home should not only provide spiritual and intellectual values and give children a criterion of good taste. "If you love and understand the beauty of nature, you are sure to develop good taste," she said. On the subject of colors for interiors she said that any one who loves nature has a love of color. A comfortable atmosphere is something that always is available.

The necessity for cutting down on the use of imported raw materials will probably result in increased standardization of clothing and footwear in Israel, Dr. A. Ashkenazi, Director of the Textile, Clothing and Leather Department of the Ministry of Trade and Industry, declared. The economy plan is also intended to ensure a sufficient supply of good quality and low priced utility goods for the home market, as well as exports. Dr Ashkenazi said that representatives of consumers and manufacturers will be consulted on the types of goods to be produced. He indicated that a standard weave of a specified number of threads, and standard yarns, would be authorized for the production of textiles. Special care will be taken to insure the quality of leather used in utility footwear. Raw materials for consumer goods will be allocated only for essential items, but factories producing export goods will not be covered by the standardization plan. They will be encouraged to put out better quality goods for the foreign market and for domestic sale at prices above those charged for utility products.

Twelve Sifrei Torah (Scrolls of the Law), which formerly belonged to synagogues in Germany destroyed by the Nazis, are being sent by the National Jewish Welfare Board's Division of Religious Activities to Jewish chaplains for use at religious services at military installations in the U. S. The Scrolls were turned over to JWB by the American Joint Distribution Committee. The first of the Scrolls went to Chaplain Harry Schreiner, who had been sent from Fort Benning by the U. S. Army authorities to acquire one for the post. The 12 "rescued" Sifrei Torah had been kept in the Paris office of JDC as part of a stock of Scrolls that had been unidentifiable.

new amendment is the result of a demand by Army chiefs that this loophole be eliminated.

The Premier's political opponents state, however, that this is a political move to show the Orthodox bloc that it cannot attain its demands without Mapai support and to divest the Mapai of the aura of religiosity that it may have developed in the eyes of some workers as a result of the coalition.

These opponents say that since the fall of his Cabinet, Mr. Ben-Gurion has refused to show the same spirit of conciliation that he demanded of the nation on all matters outside of security and immigration less than a month ago, says the Times.

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

The Visit Of Rabbi Judah Maimon

Montreal Jewry is indebted to Rabbi Zambrowsky, executive vice-president of the Mizrachi, and his associates for having made possible the visit of His Excellency, the Minister of Religious Affairs of Israel to this city. At the civic reception tendered by His Worship, Mayor Houde, to Rabbi Maimon, I voiced the thought that Rabbi Maimon is the symbol of the fulfillment of that prophecy which centuries ago proclaimed the restoration of the captivity of Israel and the reconstitution of the Jewish State. May we therefore not lose faith in that other prophetic promise which visioned a time "when nations shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks and learn war no more." This dream of God's Kingdom on Earth is not a fairy tale and is bound to come. Despite the present tragic events, man must hope courageously for that day.

A company of Christian clergymen and Jewish Rabbis met with Rabbi Maimon and placed before him a number of questions. It was good to hear the Cabinet Minister of Israel emphasize that he himself is opposed to a theocracy and that Israel, the State of Israel, will ever be in every sense of the word a democracy. He indicated that should there be organized Reform or Conservative Jewish Congregations in the State and should these summon Rabbis to minister to them, the Minister of Religious Affairs will without hesitancy appoint Liberal Rabbis to minister to such congregations.

At the banquet tendered by the Mizrachi Organization of Canada, Dr. Maimon recalled the unique contribution which Mizrachi has made toward the establishment of the State of Israel. He pointed out that he was the sole survivor of the forty men who founded the Mizrachi Organization. For fifty years he has given of himself to that interpretation of Zionism which stresses Torah and the spiritual values of the Jewish people. The banquet brought together a large assemblage of men and women from every section of the Jewish community.

We rejoice that the first cabinet minister of the State of Israel to visit Canada was none other than the Minister of Religious Affairs, for we believe that Israel as a State has only significance if it is founded and rooted in Torah. Just to be another secular State would prove the two-thousand-year dream of the restoration to have been a meaningless one. Through the State of Israel, rooted in Torah and in the teachings of the great prophets and Rabbis, Israel can rediscover its true vocation in the world, namely that of witnessing to God of all humanity, and it can serve as a pattern State for other lands in the furtherance of social justice and righteousness.

Old in years and rich in achievements, Rabbi Maimon, at the age of seventy-five, still displays a youthfulness and a determination that is in every way astounding. We were glad that he came here and we trust that his visit will stimulate all sections of our community to rededicate themselves anew to the challenging tasks of Zion restored and to the spiritual and religious values without which Jewish life in the diaspora for long is impossible. Well has Rabbi Maimon emphasized the tragedy of ignorance of matter Jewish that is so prevalent and that is so threatening to Jewish life throughout the world.

As Rabbi Maimon makes his way to return to Israel we wish him godspeed and pray that he be granted many more years of useful service to his people. We also hope that before he has left the country he will have met with the non-orthodox religious leaders in order to obtain from them directly what disturbs them as to the difficulty, real or imaginary, which may confront religious liberal groups in present-day Israel. We trust too that as a result of his visit Rabbi Maimon will all the more strive to restore some form of the Sanhedrin, an authoritative religious body that will be of help in harmonizing Jewish law with present-day Jewish life, not only for the State of Israel, but that the Sanhedrin may help give guidance to Jewish life in the diaspora.

W.J.C. ATTEMPTS

deration once the Jewish Federation of Rio and Sao Paulo reached agreement, declared, "I am sure that the Jewish community of Brazil will fully live up to its great duties for the benefit of the Jewish people, especially in view of the fact that the tragic Hitler-caused destruction of two-thirds of European Jewry has charged the 650,000 Jews in Latin America with a special task in the struggle for Jewish survival." Declaring that the prestige of WJC in Brazil was rising steadily, he pointed to the aid and advice which the Congress and its permanent representative in Brazil, Dr. Vejtech Winterstein, formerly a leading figure among Czechoslovak Jewry, have long been giving to the movement for unity in Brazil. A growing conviction exists, he said, that "the Jewish community in Brazil should play an active role in the WJC voluntary association of Jewish communities."

Stating that the comparatively young Yishuv in Brazil was full of vigor, he paid tribute to the executive and Council of the Federation of Jews in Rio and especially to the Federation's spirited president, Dr. Fritz Feigl, a world-renowned chemist and active friend of the World Jewish Congress, for their community leadership. Dr. Schwarzbart had planned to visit the Jewish communities in Sao Paulo and such cities as Porto Alegre but his trip was cut short by illness. During a stopover at Port of Spain on his return flight to New York, Dr. Schwarzbart discussed matters of Jewish concern with community leaders in Trinidad. There he was met by a delegation headed by Mrs. Chuma Averbouch, president of Women's International Zionist Organization, and Dr. B. Pulver, local WJC leader. He learned that the small Jewish community of Trinidad had considerable "zeal for and devotion to Jewish affairs."

RABBI JONAH WISE

gogue, Rabbi Wise declared that religion in America was "essentially a gigantic farce" and that "once it breaks through the bonds of tradition and ecclesiastical politicism it will produce something which will electrify the human soul and challenge the human mind."

The Jewish leader was frankly skeptical of the traditional manner in which politicians arbitrarily divide their constituents into Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish blocs to organize city and state campaigns. Every religious leader, he said, should "deplore" such "violent deviation" from the democratic ideals of America and "everyone should fight against it."

Proposing that a detailed study be made of the various religious groups in New York, Rabbi Wise predicted that its results would reveal the need for a spiritual program that "most of us only dimly realize."

In commenting on the role of church and synagogue overseas, he emphasized that while religion was facing grave difficulties behind the Iron Curtain there was "every evidence to believe that it has by no means been destroyed."

"I know as a matter of fact," he said, "that the Jews in Russia continue to cling in large numbers to their religion despite the snares and scorns of the official atheisms, often of their own children and in many instances of their elders. They are witnesses to the persistence of the spiritual."

Rabbi Wise said: "We are standing at the edge of a new era with upsets and threats of war. America is to be the deciding factor as to whether civilization is to continue. Russia is incapable of establishing a world civilization."

An unspecified sum of money was presented to Rabbi Wise to be used by him for whatever purpose he desires.

According to Rabbi Wise, one of religion's greatest works through the past quarter century has been its labors in the field of charity.

"Practically every religious sect concerns itself with the alleviation of the mistakes and accidents of our social structure," he declared. "In addition to its concern for the poor, organized religion in the United States has assumed active responsibility for social progress in every field.

"Without presuming to interfere with government the religions of America are continually pressing on national and state Legislatures for the renovation of our social structure. Catholics, Protestants and Jews each in their own organizations and frequently associated with one another have become jealous guardians of human welfare. At times organized religion interferes, but that occurs seldom. When it does, it should honestly be met."

Rabbi Wise was enthusiastic in his praise of the interfaith movement over the last twenty-five years. Noting the increase in interdenominational activities and its consequent impact on religious leaders generally, he asserted that the interfaith movement "has at last assumed definite direction."

Radio and television, according to Rabbi Wise, "will eventually create a new atmosphere for religion." While books have been published and "disputations" heard for hundreds of years, he observed, most of these have been read or listened to by the few.

"One stands aghast," he commented, "at the prospect of what might have happened if some of our prophets and saints had access to the radio in their day. Of course it has its essential and necessary limitations but it presents a staggering possibility just the same. Those of us who have witnessed its growth see a great future for American religion in this miracle of our quarter century."

In summing up, Rabbi Wise said that the progress of religion "is bound up with the growth of democracy here and abroad and is bound up also with man's belief in God as announced by the prophets of old, glorified by the Psalmists, and exemplified by Jews and Christians in smoothing the rough road upon which it seems humanity still must travel."

The Jews Should Be Hebrew Conscious

BY RABBI THEODORE SCHWARTZ, OF THE BETH SHOLOM SYNAGOGUE TALMUD TORAH, TORONTO, ONTARIO.

With the establishment of the State of Israel our two-thousand-year-old dream has been partially realized. World Jewry, in one way or another has made possible this miraculous achievement. Jewish pioneers went to Israel to reclaim the neglected soil, and by their toil transformed the desert into green pasture. Jewish capital industrialized Israel, and Jewish soldiers fought against great odds to defend and preserve what has been created.

With the recognition of Israel, came also the recognition of Hebrew as the official language of the country. Hebrew faculties have been opened in many colleges and universities outside Israel, and students of many nationalities have registered for these courses. Hebrew newspapers and books published in Israel, are being read the world over. So far, so good.

The people in Israel consider themselves as the vanguard of their nation. One of their chief aims is to make it possible for more and more Jews to return to, and settle in Israel. It is our duty to enable them to do so. This duty of ours to Israel takes on many aspects. It is not sufficient merely to send money or people. It involves other things as well. One of the things that every one of us can do, is to learn Hebrew. The knowledge of Hebrew is the natural medium through which we can keep in close touch with the development of Israel. It can become the common denominator that would bind together our people in the various lands, and strengthen the essential ties that differences in language tend to weaken. It can also serve as a safeguard against assimilation.

We must remember what has happened to the Jewish people once before, and draw the necessary conclusions. The Jewish people has witnessed the greatest national disaster that can befall any nation. I am referring to the ten lost tribes. Think of it! Ten out of twelve tribes were lost! How did it happen? Surely, the ten tribes did not pick up and leave for an unknown destination. This move would have been noticed, and surely, prevented. No, it did not happen overnight. It happened gradually, so gradually, that it did not even attract notice. Therein lay the tragedy. It is a tragedy when a person, of his own accord, jumps into the ocean and disappears. But when a person accidently slips and disappears, that is a disaster, and one which should be guarded against. The ten tribes would not have been lost to us, had they continued using their national language, Hebrew.

During the two thousand years of Diaspora, years of persecution, abuse and massacres, we carried our language with us: in our prayer books, in the Bible, in the Cheder, and in the synagogue. We studied it in the Dark Ages, nurtured it in oceans of Jewish blood, sanctified it on the bonfires of the Inquisition, and came out victorious. The Hebrew language is alive to-day, and the mountains, meadows and valleys of Israel are filled with the sound of its sweet melody.

But what about us, who still live outside Israel? True, there is an awakening in some of us toward Hebrew, but this applies to only a few. The vast majority neither knows, nor has taken steps to learn the language. Children consider it their sacred duty to say Kaddish for deceased parents, but you, living parents, have you considered your duty to your children? Have you stopped to think that your children, or your grandchildren may also slip and disappear as have, the ten lost tribes? Have you examined your conscience? What steps have you taken to safeguard your and your children's heritage? Have you made arrangements to have your children taught Hebrew? Now is the time!

Not long so ago we entered the year 5711. Let us resolve to become Hebrew-conscious. By that I mean that those of us who know Hebrew should use it, and those of us who don't as yet, should speak about it, while endeavoring to learn. After two thousand years, the State of Israel has become a living thing, in the land of our prophets. Let us resolve to make the language of our prophets a living thing, in whatever land, we, the children of the prophets may live.

Our Dispossessed Children In Toronto

No, it is not of Europe's children that we speak, not of the victims of the cruel aftermath of war. It is for the homeless children of Toronto that we are pleading, for those bewildered victims of tragically disrupted homes, where parents have separated and neither is capable of caring for a child; where illness has broken up the home; again, where the desertion of the father has forced the mother's pre-occupation with earning the daily bread, leaving her no time for the adequate care of her children.

In the midst of such domestic upheaval, what becomes of the children? They are the responsibility of the Jewish community, but we have failed them. The Jewish Family and Child Service has on its lists approximately sixty such Jewish children in need of foster homes. Some of these have been placed in non-Jewish homes, where they are receiving kindly care and attention, but are being deprived of the Jewish culture and atmosphere which is their birthright.

Yes, we are definitely trying to stir your conscience. We are definitely trying to make you aware of your responsibility. Think what you can do! You can give a child the love, patience and understanding without which he cannot flourish. You can enrich your own life with the knowledge that you have literally saved a child, a child whom you can feel and hear and see. What gratification will be yours when you see this child lose his sense of bewilderment and insecurity, safe in the warmth of your affectionate guidance!

In taking one of these children into your home, you assume no financial burden whatever. You receive adequate compensation for room and board, and clothing and a weekly allowance are provided, as are medical and dental care. Your contribution will be to give of yourself, to provide a child with the emotional stability which will enable him to grow to happy adulthood.

The entire month of March is being devoted to a concentrated Home-Finding Campaign by the Home-Finding Committee of the Jewish Family and Child Service. This Committee is under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. B. Goldhar, with division of responsibility undertaken by Mesdames Jack Cowan and Joseph Newman (organizations); Mrs. Norman Shapiro (radio); Mrs. William Palca, Mrs. H. Kobrick (press), assisted by Mesdames David Brody, Samuel Hersenhoren, Max Nemoy, Ira Pollock, Frank Silverman, A. G. Volpe, and Miss Anne Fromer.

CANADIAN SPORTS PARADE

DURING a recent reception at Toronto's new Radio Station CKFH, the thought occurred to us that if the floor supporting the crowd of 500 or more were to suddenly collapse, the cream of the sporting world would vanish irreplacably. Newspapermen, sportscasters, promoters, hockey and football players were crowded into one jovial mass—honoring Foster Hewitt. 'Mr. Hockey' shook hands and talked with Major Conn Smythe, Joe Primeau, Ted Reeve, Happy Day, Joe Perlove, Bob Hesketh, Dave Price, Jim Coleman, Frank Tunney, Deacon Allen, Bob McGall, Dr. Harry Griffiths and others too numerous to mention. For several hours the talk rolled up and down the studios and (by actual count) the word 'sport' was mentioned 3-million, 223-thousand times. Our best wishes to CKFH (Dial 1400) and to all its merry crew. For Foster and Bill Hewitt a dream has come true, while 'W.A.' looks on approvingly.

Hockey Fan—1951

They say the most rabid NHL hockey fans are usually perched high in the greys and greens. From their lofty position these hardy souls command a sweeping view of their fellow spectators but the players performing below seem to rotate on the ice like leisurely puppets at play.

A body-check delivered by a Harry Watson or a Leo Reise, while it seems dynamic and vicious from a seat near the rail, looks like a gentle protest to our friends in heaven. "Aw, step into him, Harry! Don't be afraid of the bum!", echoes through the hall. The Maple Leafs roar to the attack and Ted Kennedy breaks through, going like the wind. "Aw, turn on the steam, Teeder! You're practically standing still!", scream these rabid fans, failing to catch the tremendous strain creasing Kennedy's face.

In the older days, before Maple Leaf Gardens and the other arenas, hockey was played right under the nose of the spectators. Each intent to murder was clearly seen by the crowd—before the killing took place. The fans were already enjoying the body-check before it actually came. This personal touch doubled the excitement of the play.

A body-check (in the Good Old Days) was a crushing blow to everyone in the rink—but then the crowd was small like the rink. Nowadays, only the few by the rail hear the 'heartbeats, but the great, loyal majority (13,000 strong) can make up in opinions and cat-calls what they miss from the greys and the greens. Undoubtedly television should revive the ancient drama of hockey by giving us all a close-up view!

Old Myth

The myth of invincibility attributed to so many of the great old players (to the disparagement of those of today) may be partially explained by the changed 'view' of the fans.

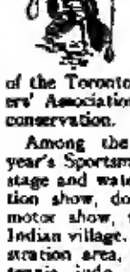
Sportsmen's Show—1951



We're informed that arrangements are practically completed for the 1951 Canadian Sportsmen's Show to be held in the Coliseum, Toronto, March 9 to 17, under the auspices of the Toronto Anglers' and Hunters' Association in the interests of conservation.

Among the highlights of this year's Sportsman's Show will be a stage and water revue, a conservation show, dog show, boat show, motor show, travel show and an Indian village. In the sports demonstration area, sports such as golf, tennis, judo, badminton, archery, boxing, fencing and so forth will be demonstrated by experts and champions.

Again this year the four floors of the Coliseum will house hundreds of commercial exhibits including all the most up-to-date equipment for fishing, hunting, camping, golf, skiing and other sports. Also, 'Sharkey', the amazing seal, will star in the big stage and water revue in the arena of the Coliseum, so set aside several evenings for this most unique and worthy show.
